The Nonsensemakers

Project Summary

Using performing arts as the entry point to developing social capital, this project aims to integrate people with and without disabilities (including the physically challenged, visually impaired, hearing impaired and ex-mentally ill). This territory-wide project is expected to enhance participants' confidence and ability to express by offering a fair chance of participating in arts, fostering the culture of collaboration with different partners, and promoting reciprocity and mutual understanding through drama trainings, sharing groups and drama performances. The troupe, which will be formed by project participants who will share their life experience, will perform at different school, demonstrating the ability of people with disabilities in overcoming adversity.
